FIFA World Cup and Street Photography Opportunities

Now that I am in Ottawa, I won't have the opportunity to shoot the streets after any of the FIFA World Cup matches in Vancouver, however if Team Canada were to win, with all the street closures and likely high attendance levels, there might be some nice opportunities to photograph jubilant fans after a game! I was out shooting a fair bit during the 2010 Winter Olympics in Vancouver and the mood was incredible after the tremendous win where the Canadian hockey team got the gold medal! Even if Canada does not win the soccer match, I'm sure there will be plenty of interesting photo ops with dressed up fans too.

Back in 2010, I was shooting with a bulky Canon EOS 7D digital SLR but even so, most people didn't seem to mind and I didn't get any dirty looks while photographing the happy crowds. Ignore the copyright message; exported from my Lightroom library today but definitely taken in 2010! These days, with a more discrete mirrorless camera, one would hopefully be even less noticed. Something like a Fujifilm X100VI, or an X-E5 with the 23mm or 27mm pancake would be perfect setups. Nikon makes some discreet pancake primes for their mirrorless cameras too, as does Canon, and there are many third-party options these days as well. Of course, you can always use your smartphone and totally blend in with the crowd.

There is one shot below during the Olympic Torch run, and there was a sea of P&S cameras as well as a few early camera phone shield up high and blocking my view so I needed to shoot with my arms extended, blindly banging off shots in the hopes that some were composed and focused properly. Today, with a mirrorless camera that has a downward tilting rear LCD, it would be much easier! I actually liked the shot with the foreground people sharp better than the one with the torch bearer sharp in the distance. These days, there would be an even larger sea of smartphones held high I'm sure! After the hockey win in 2010, the Cambie Bridge was overrun with joyous hockey fans, some even four-legged!

If you want to try shooting film, we have lots of point and shoots that you could try. They are perfect for taking quick shots as they will almost always have things in focus. Come by the shop and find a camera to take out on the streets!

*NEW* Profoto ProPanel 3x2

Some exciting news in the Beau Photo Rental Department this month! We have just received our new Profoto ProPanel 3'x2' LED light panel, the newest and latest member of Profoto's line of cinema oriented constant lighting units! The ProPanel boasts 2000W of peak power with full RGBWW light sources for adjustability from 2000K to 15,000K and also roughly 16 million different colours when utilizing the RGB, HSI XY & RGBWW modes. There are also a number of digital gels from LEE & ROSCO built in, saving one from attaching a physical gel in front of the light. In addition to its continuous light duties, the ProPanel can strobe the LED's for basic flash photography for even more versatility. The flash can also be used in any colour.

The ProPanel can be controlled in a multitude of ways including: Manual control with the onboard controls, DMX/RDM, CRMX, Profoto Air remotes, and Profoto Control App on your mobile device or computer.

As the ProPanel will use a lot of power at the higher intensity settings, you will require a robust electrical system of least 240V 15A for the full 2000W. You will need at least 120V 15A for 1600W output. The ProPanel is supplied with a Nema 6-20P power cord, but can also be used with a (supplied) regular household Nema 5-15P cord, albeit at the aforementioned reduced 1600W power output. The ProPanel is able to automatically throttle power consumption and subsequently light output based on input voltage.

Canada Day

The Canada Day holiday (July 1st) is on a Wednesday this year, and of course, Beau Photo will be closed for the 159th birthday of the best country in the world! This also means you can rent gear on Tuesday and return on Thursday for a one day charge! Book ahead to make sure you have the thing you were really hoping to try.

Secret Sauce - It's a film!

Secret Sauce is a colour 35mm film stock from Mr. Negative that stands out for its bold colors, strong contrast, and unique rendering that's often compared to Kodak Aero Color IV. It has a vibrant, punchy look with rich reds, deep greens, clean blues, and a slightly nostalgic feel that works especially well for street photography, nature, travel, and everyday shooting. The colors feel lively without looking overly processed, and depending on the light, you can get anything from warm natural tones to more vivid, almost surreal results. Part of what makes Secret Sauce so fun to shoot is that every roll feels a little different, giving photographers room to experiment while still staying easy to work with. Processed with C-41 chemicals, it's approachable for anyone shooting film but still interesting enough for experienced photographers looking for something with a distinct look and plenty of personality.

Making Prints to Hang on the Wall

A couple of days ago I had the opportunity to take Beau Photo's one-on-one printing workshop with Kathy, and it completely changed the way I think about my photographs. There's something incredibly fulfilling about seeing your work exist physically instead of only living on a phone screen or hard drive. Holding a print in your hands makes the image feel more intentional and permanent. You start noticing details differently, paying closer attention to tones, contrast, composition, and the overall feeling of the photograph in a way that digital viewing can sometimes take away from.

The workshop is designed to teach photographers how to confidently use Beau's self-serve printing station and both printers available in-store. Since the printing station is self-serve, taking the workshop is a great way to learn the process properly before booking time on the printers yourself. Kathy was an amazing teacher throughout the entire experience. She takes her time, explains every step clearly, and makes sure you fully understand the process rather than just rushing through it. Whether you're completely new to printing or looking to sharpen your workflow, the workshop feels welcoming and approachable.

As someone who's starting to take photography more seriously, this experience honestly made me want to dive even deeper into the craft. Being able to create physical prints of my own work reminded me that photography doesn't have to end once the shutter clicks.

Next on my list is Beau's "How To Develop Film" workshop, so stay tuned for the next newsletter where I'll be sharing my experience with developing my own film for the first time.
