Kibbles & Bits & Bytes - Digital News

Polaroid has just released Mac OS X software for their SprintScan 4000 and SprintScan 120 film scanners. Polacolor Insight v5.6 now supports native scanning under OS X - no more rebooting into OS 9... hooray! However, along with the announcement of the updated software, Polaroid has also announced that they are getting out of the scanner business. They have pledged to continue providing repair services and technical support so this shouldn't deter you from taking advantage of some great clearance pricing on our remaining Polaroid scanner stock (see below.)

We are now stocking Ilford Galerie Smooth Pearl inkjet paper. This heavyweight, RC base, pearl finish inkjet paper is totally waterproof and has essentially the same micro-ceramic ink receptor layer as Epson's premium gloss/semi-gloss or lustre papers. It works beautifully on the new pigment-based Epson 2200 as well as dye-based Epson 870/1270, 890/1280 or the latest 900 series. Also, the Ilford paper works well the the Canon S900 or S9000 printers. The paper has a wonderfully heavy feel with no watermark on the back, so it would be very easy to mistake an Ilford Pearl inkjet print for a conventional pearl-finish lab print. The fact that it is about 20% less expensive than competing semi-gloss or lustre papers is just icing on the cake! We are stocking the 8.5x11 inch size in quantities of 25 or 100 sheets and the 13x19 inch in 25 sheets only.

Speaking of Epson 2200 printers... they are still very difficult to come by. We have a waiting list and a few printers are trickling in each month, so if you want this printer, give us a call and get put on the list! Epson seriously underestimated the popularity of this printer and is struggling to keep up with demand. Can you say fast? Nikon has released NikonView v5.5 and for Mac OS X users, wow... what a huge improvement. It features much snappier operation along with significantly faster RAW file import into Photoshop. This software is Nikon's own digital camera image browsing software and is amazingly full featured for a free download. Even if your digital camera isn't a Nikon, the software is worth a look since it will work with JPEG files from other non-Nikon digital cameras as well.
