Two new Manfrotto products for the Strobist

We have just received our shipment of the Manfrotto Nanopole Stand and Snap Tiltthead.

The Nanopole Stand is an innovative 2-in-1 product that can be used as a traditional light stand or a hand-held boom. This is all made possible by simply pressing a button to release the center column of the stand. This makes the Nanopole stand a perfect companion for any travelling/street photographer or videographer who needs to minimize the weight and size of the gear they take with them. Manfrotto has also incorporated a leveling leg into the design which is perfect for quick set up on uneven ground. The stand is truly portable, weighing less than 1kg (2.2 lbs) and compacts to a mere 49cm.

Equally cool is the new Snap Tiltthead. This is a great retool of the Manfrotto Lite Tite. Speed is the focus of the new design. With the new counterbalance system, it is quick onto your stand and quick into the desired flash position. The new built-in cold shoe locking system makes it fast and easy to mount and lock down any speedlight flash, and the new lever lock makes it a breeze to attach and remove the head from the stand.

Nanopole Stand - $101.95

Snap Tiltthead - $53.95

RENTAL NEWS

JASON K.

Lens News:

We have some new/additional lenses in the Rental Department:

Canon 400mm f2.8L USM

We have acquired a Canon 400mm f2.8L USM non-IS lens, and we are renting it on a trial basis for $100/day or weekend. This lens is sharp, but heavy, and will require a sturdy tripod, or at least a monopod for support. Great for sports or birding!

Due to popular demand, we have added another one of each of the following lenses in our inventory:

- Canon 24-70mm f2.8L II
- Canon 35mm f1.4L
- Nikon 85mm f1.4G

Light Modifier of the Month: Profoto Deep Silver XL 7' Umbrella

This extra large Profoto light modifier is popular among portrait, people and fashion photographers. It creates a smooth but distinctive light that allows the user to illuminate an entire person or even small groups with just a single light source. The deeper shape gives the photographer better control of the light spread. It also allows the photographer to focus and shape light by simply sliding the umbrella shaft in its holder. You can combine different Profoto reflectors with the umbrella to create different looks, such as with a Magnum to focus the beam to create a bit of a hotspot but with a nice fall off, or one can just use the standard reflector. $15/day

Coming soon to your favourite camera store, Beau Photo will be stocking a select range of Sony full-frame and APS-C E-mount mirrorless cameras, lenses and accessories, as well as some high-end P&S models! In addition, we will be adding numerous items to our rental pool, not only E-mount cameras and lenses, but several highly sought after A-mount lenses as well.

Sony has been coming on strong in the mirrorless camera market for some time now and with, for example, their A7 range of lightweight, compact yet full-frame bodies (the A7, A7R and A7S) and superb new prime and zoom lenses, you can get class-leading full-frame photo and video quality in an amazingly compact kit. Check out our blog in the coming weeks and the October newsletter for more details. We should start seeing stock arrive in mid September. I will be posting some gear reviews to our blog in the near future as well.

SONY at FUSION 2014

Come to Fusion to see all the latest and greatest photo and video gear from Sony!

NEW! Fujifilm X30

$649

(see pre-order special below)

Fujifilm has announced a successor to the X20 called, unsurprisingly, the X30. While the lens (28-112mm f/2-2.8 OIS) and sensor (12MP X-Trans CMOS II) remain unchanged (at least on paper), it might be that once I get a chance to test a production camera, they could show some improvements. In any case, there are indeed many other very substantial improvements in Fujifilm's latest flagship point & shoot. Let's start with the viewfinder...

The X20 had a fairly unique hybrid optical viewfinder. While not in the same league as the ones on the X100 series or the X-Pro I, it still offered a big, bright optical view with a full-information LCD overlay. In practice it worked quite well, but one issue was somewhat vague parallax indication and once you had Fujifilm's lens hood mounted, a substantial portion of the visual FOV was blocked by the hood at some focal lengths. The X30 does away with the optical component completely and instead, now has a superb OLED EVF that performs on par with the one in the X-E2, both from a resolution and refresh standpoint. I had the opportunity to use a pre-production X30 a while back and the EVF was genuinely excellent, the best I have seen in a P&S camera! Focus peaking is also available for MF and to make things easier, there is now a smoothly turning control ring on the lens barrel that can operate MF!

This new lens barrel control ring has multiple functions, depending on what mode the camera is in. For example, in aperture priority, it controls the f-stop, in shutter-priority, the shutter speed and so on. You can redefine the control ring to other functions as well so this is a very nice upgrade to the X20. My only complaint is the lack of click-stops on the ring. Having a smooth control ring for focus makes sense of course, but every other function you use it with would benefit from tactile clicks. That said, with the audible feedback switch on (fake clicks), I did not find it annoying to use actually and it does have a firm, well-damped feel.

Also new are significantly beefed up HD video features, in fact they are better than any other X-system body including the X-T1! Well, at least with the X-T1's current firmware - with Fujifilm's generous upgrade policy, who knows, maybe we'll see an improvement with it as well? With the X30 when shooting Full-HD NTSC video, you can choose between 60, 30 or 24 fps. For PAL (new PAL support!), you have 50 and 25 fps. In addition, you now get full manual control over f-stop, shutter speed and ISO. Cool!

A few additional features (some new, some not) round out the X30 upgrade as follows: built-in WiFi with full camera control capability, up to 12fps shooting at full-res with an 18-frame JPEG buffer; shot-to-shot times of 0.3 seconds in single shot mode, new battery with longer life (470 shots/charge), new "Classic Chrome" film simulation mode (apparently it's similar to Kodachrome!), fully customizable Quick (Q) menu, multiple exposures, built-in time-lapse shooting and much more! The one minor complaint I have is that the camera no longer ships with a dedicated external charger - you have to use a USB cable to charge the battery in the camera. But wait...

As a pre-order special, Fujifilm is also offering a package that includes an external AC battery charger as well as an extra NP-95 battery pack at no-charge, which is a $170 retail value for free!

So if you are interested in the X30, don't delay and call us to get your pre-order in ASAP. The free charger and extra battery are only available in a very limited number and only the first shipment, in fact maybe only part of the first shipment, will qualify for that promo...

NEW! Hasselblad CFV-50C Digital Back ($17,250 CDN)

Do you still have a classic V-series Hasselblad kit that you'd like bring into modern times, something like a 500C or a 503CW? Well Hasselblad has announced a new version of their CFV back with the outstanding new 50MP CMOS sensor that is powering their stunning H5D-50C. This new sensor has the same high ISO and dynamic range prowess of the absolute best 35mm sensors, like the ones in Nikon's D800 for example, but at a whopping 50 megapixels at a much larger medium format size of course, offering the unique look and 3D sense of depth that only medium format can give you. In addition, it is gorgeously styled with chrome highlights to perfectly match that classic Hasselblad look! Contact us for details!

Nikon D810 Recall & DSLR Price Drops & Rebates!

Nikon has issued a recall notice for the new D810 body. We had to send all of our inventory back and re-order replacement cameras. The only issue is "white specks" that are visible in long exposures when you are not using Long-Exposure NR. A pretty minor problem for most people, and not an issue at all if you do use Long-Exposure NR, but it is something I reported to Nikon right away since I do a lot of night shooting, light painting and such and saw that it was a little noisier than my D800. We were hoping that a simple firmware update would fix it, but it turns out Nikon needs to do a sensor recalibration as well as a firmware update.

Apparently the recalibration and update only takes Nikon about 15 minutes to do, so I would suggest contacting the local Nikon service facility in Richmond and arrange to take your camera in when you have some time to spare. Again, no image quality issues for the vast majority of situations, just longer time exposures with Long-Exposure NR disabled.

If you have recently purchased a D810, you can tell if the fix has already been applied if there is a black dot inside the tripod mount on the bottom of the camera. Call us if you need more info on this recall...

FILM / ANALOG NEWS

New from the Impossible Project

The new Spectra Black and White has also arrived. When shooting, I found it to be higher contrast than the older generation Silver Shade which is quite low contrast. I snapped a quick photo of my cat this morning, then this afternoon created an emulsion lift from it. I was curious to see if there would be any huge differences lifting with the new B&W formula. The last Impossible Project Silver Shade film I used to lift admittedly was a little past due, but I found it easily disintegrated in the water when the translucent slimy white layer washed off. The new Spectra B&W felt sturdier and I found it extremely easy to lift, however I had trouble getting the translucent slimy layer to leave the emulsion. Perhaps because of this, some of my lifts dried more yellow than others have in the past. I even took a severely underexposed photo and lifted it, in the past this would have been tricky but this new film appears to be very sturdy.

An image on the new Spectra B&W formula film before and after being lifted.

Back To School...

Or not to school? That is the question. When things have settled, please let me know what supplies you'll need to get your photo year moving along. I have stock on hand, but haven't placed my fall order yet.

Please take a look at your photo mount samples. If they're a bit dog-eared and tired looking, it's probably time to replace or update them. If I don't have the item you'd like on hand, I'll gladly request it on your behalf (Both AGT and TAP are happy to provide samples). As well, we've just received some event presentation mount samples from AGT (a golf folder, team mount, Viewmount, CD folder, etc.), which we'd be delighted to share with you. Please contact me: barb@beauphoto.com and let me know what you'd like.

We've recently received samples of TAP's Boutique Baby packaging and have them on display. There are folders, photo cases, boxes, belly bands and easels geared to 'Small Fry' photo presentation. The colours are bright and cheerful and really enhance the images. We will be special-ordering by case quantity only while we assess the popularity of the line.
